

Workshop: NON-IDEAL Stockholm SOCIAL ONTOLOGY III June 11th-12st, 2018

Monday 11th of June

9.00 Welcome

9.15-10.30 Robin Zheng,
Yale-NUS College,

Responding to Bias: Oughts, Ideals, and Appraisals

11.00-12.15 Åsa Burman,
Stockholm University &
Institute for Futures Studies,

Collective Responsibility for Implicit Bias

12.15-13.30 Lunch

13.30-14.45 Katharina Berndt Rasmussen,
Institute for Futures Studies,

Implicit Bias and Discrimination

15.15-16.30 Alex Madva,
California State Polytechnic University,

Responsibility for Interpreting Implicit Bias

19.00 Workshop Dinner

Room: Meeting Room, Institute for Futures Studies,
Holländargatan 13

Tuesday 12th of June

9.00-10.15 Rebecca Mason,
University of San Francisco,
Oppression and Incredulity

10.30-11.45 Johan Brännmark,
Malmö University,

Institutions, Ideology, and Non-Ideal Social Ontology

11.45-13.15 Lunch

13.15-14.30 Staffan Carlshamre,
Stockholm University,

Natural Kinds, Social Kinds, Mixed Kinds

14.45-16.00 Katharine Jenkins,
University of Nottingham,

Sex and Gender, Grounding and Anchoring

Room: Bergsmannen, Aula Magna,
Stockholm University Campus

Stockholm University

By 'non-ideal social ontology', we have in mind social ontology that starts with difficult, complicated cases of immediate importance to social theory, rather than starting from simplified or abstracted examples and deferring consideration of more messy phenomena. Our thinking is that just as critical philosophers of race such as Charles Mills have made a case for the importance of non-ideal political philosophy, non-ideal social ontology could play an important role in advancing emancipatory social theory.

Organized by Åsa Burman & Katharina Berndt Rasmussen
Sponsored by Jane and Dan Olsson Foundation,
Institute for Futures Studies,
and the Department of Philosophy, Stockholm University

Questions? Please contact: asa.burman@philosophy.su.se