

A Future of Expulsions

Today's socioeconomic and environmental dislocations cannot be fully understood in the usual terms of poverty and injustice, but more accurately in terms of expulsion—from professional livelihood, from living space, even from the very biosphere that makes life possible. At this seminar, Saskia Sassen will draw from her most previous book Expulsions. Brutality and Complexity in the Global Economy where she examines the shrinking global economies, the new global market for land, the triumph of finance capital, and the dying environment.

Moderator Göran Rosenberg, and comments by:

Roger Andersson, professor of social and economic geography at Uppsala University. His current research is focused on residential segregation, intra-urban migration, urban policy and the economic and social integration of immigrants.

Lisa Pelling, chief analyst at the think tank Arena Idé and PhD Student at the University of Vienna where she is conducting research on transnational migration and remittances.

SASKIA SASSEN

Saskia Sassen is Robert S. Lynd Professor of Sociology at Columbia University. Her research and writing focuses on globalization (including social, economic and political dimensions), immigration, global cities (including cities and terrorism), the new technologies, and changes within the liberal state that result from current transnational conditions.

In addition to her appointments at Columbia University, Saskia Sassen serves on several editorial boards and is an advisor to several international bodies. She has received a variety of awards and prizes and has written for The Guardian, The New York Times, Le Monde Diplomatique, the Financial Times, among others.
